Attendance this Week

This week there has been 7 hours and 50 minutes minutes lost to lateness.

Although most children arrive in school on time, those who are even a couple of minutes late are impacted. Those minutes include crucial connection time with peers and staff, understanding the routine of the day and what their first learning tasks are. Children are learning from the minute they hang up their coats!

For parents with multiple children going to different entrances around school, promoting independence with your older children to begin walking to those locations would help them to be in their classrooms ready for those initial welcomes and instructions. Staff on the playground can support and ensure the children are where they need to be.

Let's work together to make every minute of the school day count!
